SANKTUAREE!

CARNIVAL

AN INVITATION

Think about it! What if the many usual ways we try to engage in the political happenings of our days only serve to stabilize the politics? What if the way we respond to crisis is part of the crisis?

Sanktuaree is a ritual space that involves people coming together in radical acts of hospitality. When these many Sanktuaree projects come together, they create a Sanktuaree carnival.

The carnival is an upending of politics as usual – inviting performance, conversation, dance, silence, meditation, and anything that hacks the ways the city conditions us to see and relate to the world. Instead of protest and mass gatherings, we dot the streets with circles of activity – creating an ecosystem of magic and acceptance. Our vocation is to generate/open up ‘other places of power’, where the contours of new political imaginaries can be felt and noticed as if for the first time.

Where the seen can be unseen and the unseen, seen.

If you host a Sanktuaree project, consider creating a Sanktuaree Carnival in your neighbourhood/city. Even if you haven’t started a Sanktuaree, a carnival can be a great way to generate many Sanktuarees!
